Meet Emanu-El’s New Co-Presidents

We are thrilled to announce that Ellen Kaye Fleishhacker has been elected to serve as Co-President of the Board of Directors. Ellen is joining our current President Alan Greinetz, effective January 1, 2022. Last year, the membership approved allowing for co-presidents to advance Emanu-El’s goal of maintaining a diverse leadership team with the skills needed to fulfill its mission to the community.

Ellen has served on Emanu-El’s Board since 2018 and on the Executive Committee since 2019, recently as Board Secretary. Professionally, Ellen is Co-Managing Partner of the global law firm, Arnold & Porter Kaye Scholer. Her background advising clients on the legal aspects of important financial matters and her management experience have already benefited Emanu-El. A Temple member for 20 years, Ellen’s two adult children, Kara and Jonah, attended the preschool and then YFE through 12th grade. Her husband William’s ancestors were among the families that founded Congregation Emanu-El in 1851.

The Board also re-elected Alan for his final one-year term to serve as Co-President. Alan has served on the Board since 2014 and as President since 2018. Alan said “I’m very excited to embark on the Co-Presidency model at Emanu-El which I believe will serve the institution well with broader leadership and I could not be happier to be working with Ellen. Our community is lucky to have such a talented leader in Ellen who is willing to serve, and I am honored to be able to continue in service to the Temple.”

If you have questions for Alan or Ellen, you can reach them at president@emanuelsf.org.

Shabbat with Manny Yekutiel

Friday, January 7, 2022. 6:00 - 7:00 pm

Manny Yekutiel founded Manny’s — a community focused meeting and learning place in the heart of San Francisco that combines a non-profit restaurant, political bookshop, and civic events and gathering space — in 2016. Manny’s has become a cornerstone of the community, and we are excited to welcome Manny to speak during Shabbat. Learn more and RSVP online at emanuelsf.org/calendar.
Hearing Each Other
Shalom Rav from Richard and Rhoda Goldman Senior Rabbi Jonathan Singer

"Bersheet Bara — In the beginning, creation unfolded" is one translation of this opening text of the Torah. Another, promulgated by Ibn Ezra, an 11th century Spanish commentator, begs to differ. The Masorites who added the helper vowels to the printed version of the text, he reminds us, made a choice. Their rendering produced the approach that many take — but he points out that it is also correct to read it not as "In the beginning," but "In a beginning," creation unfolded. I love that approach and the fact that I can encounter a radically different understanding of the creation story in almost every traditional Torah commentary. When you open such a commentary, called a Mikraot Gedolot, you see on the page many opinions supporting the well-known thesis “two Jews, three (if not more) opinions.”

I think this Jewish encouragement of multiplicity of perspectives while still embracing a strong sense of community is important as we consider what it means to be a synagogue today. That the synagogue serves as a "third" place in this time of alienation and atomization, especially as we learn to live with COVID, is to me more important than ever. It needs to be a place where Jews can discuss and hear different ideas, including those that may make each of us uncomfortable. But lately, I have heard from more than a few of you that you worry that the bully pulpit is used by us clergy, at times, for exactly that purpose: to bully from the pulpit. I appreciate that concern because I know what a privilege it is for us as clergy to have freedom of the pulpit and teach Judaism from our varying perspectives. And I recognize that it can be a burden at times to hear words with which you disagree as you sit respectfully in the congregation.

I want to convey to you that we as a clergy team do understand that it is our essential duty to teach Torah and promote a deeper understanding and love of Judaism. As I look back at the sermon flow this past year, many were not politically or policy focused, but were spiritual or Torah focused messages. And yet we as clergy are also charged to promote Jewish values that reflect a living Torah and are applied to our lives today. Those values of loving the stranger, caring for the poor and for the earth, seeking justice, or promoting Zionism, are not the bastion of either the Democratic or Republican parties, but in our politically charged day each of us can reach such a conclusion after hearing a particular sermon.

I acknowledge having worked as a rabbi for over 30 years that people often hear either what they want to hear or attach to one part of a teaching and don't focus on the totality. Certainly, we clergy have our political perspectives, but we are a diverse bunch and do want to engage the whole community. And if you as congregants disagree with something we have taught, we all welcome your response and engagement in respectful discussion.

What is most important is that we both promote the beauty of Torah and its call to reach higher in our lives, and then not be afraid to engage in dialogue as community.

The synagogue is not just a big tent, but a center of Jewish dynamic creativity and, like a page of Torah commentary, needs all of us to share our piece of Torah with each other and not shy away when we disagree. God loves diversity and we at Emanu-El love and respect all our members whether you are right, left, center or, like me, at times a mix of all of the above.

We are learning to live with COVID and Emanu-El is striving to be a place that is welcoming, that is safe, but that is also a center of meaning and a home to the Jewish people. I encourage you to come daven with us, hear us, and engage us if you agree or disagree — for that is what we Jews have always done!

Happy Secular New Year!
35th Annual Martin Luther King, Jr. Pulpit Exchange and Tu B'Shevat Weekend

Friday-Sunday, January 14-17, RSVP Required
For more info and to RSVP: emanuelsf.org/mlk

Join us Friday through Monday, January 14–17, for a weekend of worship, sermons, music, and the opportunity to gather and connect once again with the members of Congregation Emanu-El and Third Baptist Church. Reverend Amos Brown will deliver the sermon at 6:30 pm at Emanu-El Friday evening as we welcome the light of Shabbat into the community. We'll gather at 5:30 pm for dinner in the courtyard (vegetarian and vegan options available), create communal art, and stay late for vibrant conversation, hot drinks, and spirits post-service. All ages welcome!

On Sunday, Congregation Emanu-El members are also invited to take part in Third Baptist Church’s annual Martin Luther King, Jr. Sunday morning service, with a sermon delivered by Rabbi Beth Singer, a musical presentation from Cantor Luck, and greetings to the church delivered by one of our synagogue leaders.

The culminating activity for this incredible weekend will be the historical Martin Luther King, Jr. March, this year on Tu B'Shevat! Beforehand we will meet up at SF’s Caltrain Station at 4th and King, where our group will be led by our friends in the SF Black & Jewish Unity Coalition.

This MLK weekend coincides with Tu B'Shevat, so we will be taking this time to celebrate the holiday and explore the intersections of social, environmental, and food justice, and the impact these disparities have on local communities of color. We will have a communal mutual aid opportunity at Emanu-El on Friday night — look for an updated list of items (i.e. dental hygiene items, pantry items, etc) you can bring to fill up our Tzedakah Boxes at emanuelsf.org/mlk!
Weekend Schedule
Friday, January 14 at Congregation Emanu-El
5:00 pm: Gather and Schmooze
We will have a Tzedakah Corner in the courtyard throughout the night, where you can drop off pantry items and dental hygiene items! Look for an updated list on our website.
5:30 pm: Community Dinner in the Courtyard (Mexican, vegetarian/vegan options available)
Our Repair the World/I Have a Dream Tu B'Shevat Tree interactive art project will be available for all ages to contribute to during our schmooze and dinner. Write down your hopes for the world on a leaf and help fill our branches!
6:30 pm: MLK Commemoration Service with sermon by Rev. Amos Brown in the Main Sanctuary
After the Service: Gather in the courtyard for hot beverages, cookies, adult beverages, and lively conversation

Sunday, January 16 at Third Baptist Church
10:00 am: Sunday Morning Service with sermon by Rabbi Beth Singer and music by Cantor Arik Luck
Reception to Follow

Monday, January 17
11:00 am: MLK Parade/March with Emanu-El and the SF Black & Jewish Unity Coalition
Meeting location: SF’s Caltrain Station (4th and King)
Praying With Their Feet

Martin Luther King, Jr. and Rabbi Abraham Joshua Heschel first met in Chicago at a conference on Religion and Race. The bond between them was immediate. Color in this picture of two great leaders during their historic March on Selma, after which Rabbi Heschel famously said "I prayed with my feet" — and don't forget to pray with your feet at our march on Monday, January 17! More information on page 5.
Revisioning the Future of Youth & Family Education

At Congregation Emanu-El, families were able to help form the future of our YFE program through Visioning Meetings. Leo Fuchs, Director of YFE, created these meetings to encourage parents to discuss their visions for the future of the YFE program at Emanu-El and how those visions might be achievable.

By Jackie Peterson
Communications Manager

"YFE under Leo Fuchs is in good hands. He gets it," Allen Mathis said.

Mathis recently participated in a Visioning Meeting for Emanu-El’s Youth and Family Education program.

“I went to represent and I was just pleasantly surprised,” he said. Mathis attended an in-person meeting which led off with a teaching from Director of YFE Leo Fuchs, after which Director Fuchs asked all of the attendees questions about their visions and added the group’s ideas to a board.

“Really, what I got out of it was how educated, mindful, and self-enlightened the parents were,” Mathis said. “I felt very uplifted just listening to these other parents.”

“YFE under Leo Fuchs is in good hands. He gets it.”

Mathis said many of the parents in attendance also wanted their children to know “what it’s like to be Jewish — to learn to be Jewish.”

He went on to describe the meeting as a very Jewish experience. “There was a huge sense of connection,” he said. “The great thing was just having a sit-down and really getting people to get out what’s going on and talking about raising your kids, wanting them to be Jewish, in a very secular world.”

What is Allen Mathis’s vision for the future of YFE at Emanu-El, both in and out of the classroom?

“The synagogue is not supposed to be a museum where children are supposed to learn to be quiet. It's a vibrant, dynamic living experience. You know, if we want our children to learn how to be Jewish, one great place is in services. The simple vision, one that’s attainable, is that YFE provides families defining rituals that help them be Jewish. Because Jews, we’re not a religion of faith as much as a religion of behavior.”

Mathis went on to explain that Isaac, his child, has helped him to reconnect to Judaism in a new way since joining the YFE program. He had considered skipping Chanukah at home altogether because it was so early this year, but the YFE program meant that Isaac brought the holiday home with him. “I think the best thing YFE can do is teach us the rituals,” Mathis said. “And then the children can become teachers of their religion to the adults.”

Isaac, who is in Kindergarten, continues to surprise Mathis with the Jewish identity that has been shaped, in part, by the YFE program. “You know, he really wants to meet Santa Claus,” Mathis said. “But he still said ‘Daddy, yesterday I told everyone in kindergarten that I’m Jewish.’ I said, oh my God. This temple is amazing.”

Mathis and his wife used to regularly attend Emanu-El B’nei Mitzvah services before they had Isaac, he said. “It was so fun, because you get a really intimate experience for free. You could see how moved the parents were, and you’d think, ‘wow.’ I think everyone is looking for spirituality, and it’s right here.”
Ways to Give

Making a gift to Emanu-El is a meaningful way to honor friends and family while supporting the synagogue. The Temple offers a variety of donation opportunities so all members can participate in the mitzvah of tzedakah at whatever level is comfortable. For additional information about our different funds and various ways to give, please visit our website.

Emanu-El Next: Investing for our Jewish Future

We believe that Judaism guides us on our journey to be better people, create community, and repair the world. Our historic home has long been cherished as a magnificent building that symbolizes Jewish arrival and integration into our city. But the building no longer adequately serves the need of the Emanu-El community and hinders our ability to effectively support and engage our congregation. The demands of the 21st century Jewish community — and Emanu-El’s 1,800 congregant families — are quite different than those of the 300 families in the 1920s who created our current building. That’s why we have embarked on an ambitious effort to revitalize and reimagine our home to meet the expanding needs of our current members and those of generations to come.

Donor Spotlight: David Friedman

Congregation Emanu-El is delighted to count David Friedman among the supporters of Emanu-El Next. A longtime member of our congregation, he and his wife, Paulette Meyer, set aside a portion of their contribution for testamentary giving. “I love the idea of a legacy gift for the future — the future beyond me: the next generation. That’s why the ‘Next’ in this campaign is a profound gesture to what it’s all about.”

David is no stranger to capital campaigns with architectural engineering components, having chaired several within and beyond the Jewish community. “My background made me think with a slightly more critical eye about the project,” David reflects. “I’ve seen a lot of what works and what doesn’t. And this time, I saw all of the pieces in place.”

A structural and earthquake engineer, former CEO of Forell/Elsesser Engineers, and a board member of SPUR — David has worked on many large projects throughout his career, including the Jewish Community Center of San Francisco, a handful of Jewish Home of San Francisco projects and campaigns, and the collaboration between the Jewish Home and the Palo Alto JCC in what is now the Taube Koret Campus for Jewish Life.

Born to a family with a long philanthropic history, David’s mother, “Phyllis Friedman, was a philanthropist with a capital P,” he remarks with respect and regard. His father, Howard Friedman, was born and raised an Orthodox Jew in Yonkers, New York. He joined the United States Naval Construction Battalion, also known as the Seabees, and came into Port in San Francisco in 1943 while stationed in the South Pacific. He and other Jewish service members went to shabbat at Emanu-El.

“My great grandmother, Fannie Haas, used to go to temple on Friday nights. She would invite servicemen she saw there to her home on Washington Avenue, ostensibly for shabbat dinner, but really to meet her granddaughters!” David laughs, “My father went, and that’s how my parents met.”

A third-generation member of Emanu-El, David Friedman has been extraordinarily impressed with Emanu-El Next. “All of the questions I might ask about the project were thought through,” he recalls. “By the time a visit was made to our home it was just a matter of reflecting on our own motivations to give.”
Emanu-El Next was conceived by looking at the administrative spaces of the courtyard building — to find out how to, in an already packed space, get more use out of it. And David was brought in from the start. “When you want to renovate, you have to assess the existing structure,” David says, “My firm was contracted to do the initial assessment, and during the analysis, we found some seismic vulnerabilities.”

“I presented what the seismic issues were to the Emanu-El Building Committee, and ultimately the question became: how do we deal with it?” After careful planning, the leaders of Emanu-El encapsulated the seismic retrofit into an expansive vision for the whole temple.

“More than just a captivating, advanced architectural design — there was a method to what was trying to be achieved by returning to Lake Street for the grand entry,” David says. “The design eliminates the seismic hazards, keeps the historic façade on the sidewalks, and does security in a way that makes sense. It brings everything up to code, and up to date in terms of how people will use it, giving the entire assemblage of buildings a life into the next 100 years.”

Considering his family ties to our temple, David feels honored to have grown closer with the leadership, clergy and congregants over the years of his involvement with Emanu-El Next. He believes his work throughout his career has been incredibly rewarding thanks to the people he’s met along the way.

“Emanu-El Next truly became important to me because it was important to a whole group of some of my favorite people — and some of my true friends — rolling up their sleeves for the future of our community.”

Emanu-El Next is less than $2 million away from its $97 million goal! With a generous 1:1 match from The Koret Foundation, now is the time to contribute and help finish our effort to revitalize our home. Onegs are Coming Back!

After almost two years, a limited post-Shabbat Oneg is returning to Emanu-El in January 2022. The Oneg is a vital part of our Jewish tradition, as it lets us gather and celebrate the joy of Shabbat — Oneg Shabbat literally translates to “Joy of Sabbath.”

After each Shabbat service, we will be providing individually-wrapped Challahs, pre-poured Kiddush wine, and individually-wrapped fruit and/or cheese.

While this is an exciting opportunity to slowly reintroduce Onegs at Emanu-El, this plan is subject to change due to COVID safety protocols, Emanu-El public health and safety guidelines and the advice of our medical advisory team to keep our community safe.

We look forward to seeing you at the next Oneg!
